THE CHINA MAIL.

HONGKONG, MONDAY, JULY 6, 1868. CHINKEANG AND TAMSUY. It is somewhat singular that just at the time when Her Majesty's Government has come to the conclusion that the prospects of Chinkeang do not warrant the maintenance of even a vice-consular establishment, the latest report from the Commissioner of Customs at that port should show a decided increase in import business. In cotton goods alone we find that in February last 13,500 pieces were received and in March nearly 19,000 more-"this latter figure differing but slightly from the total yearly importation in 1865 and 1866 and equal to one fourth of that of 1867." . The Commissioner, whose report is dated in April and therefore presumably written in ignorance of our intentions to reduce the_ consular establishment, states that although this increase is perhaps a temporary one, "yet it must be regarded as proof of a rapidly growing demand in the country of which Chinkeang is the supplying centre." It will be recollected by most of our readers that this point was selected as a treaty port, in spite of some natural disadvantages, on account of its central position in the Hoopeh province and so far as customs reports are any guide—and we presume they are the sole source of information—its selection seems to have been justified by the result. Nor is it in cotton goods alone that improvement has been visible. "Silk. Piece Goods, the principal article of export, shews a comparatively excellent quarterly total, amounting in value to Tls. 80,000. Since the beginning of the year, 20 silk chops, having in all 60 looms, having been opened, as well as two silk hongs." These are not the only promises that the present year holds out of being a prosperous one. "Shops and dwellings are rapidly building, and many applicants to occupy them appear before they are completed. The issue of several proclamations in reference to the restoration of dwellings and temples shews that the people are rapidly returning to their former houses. The crops are flourishing in the country; and unless the province should be visited by war, famine, or pestilence, the year 1868 may in the growth it will bring to this port." With these facts before us it seems somewhat strange that not even a Vice-Consul is to be retained at the port. The main cause is doubtless to be found in the fact that the British residents are so cient number to render a representative necessary or desirable. But judging simply from this same report from which we quote, it would appear that almost the whole of the trade recorded is imported and exported in foreign bottoms, mainly of course steamers; and it would seem that prompt consular action might at times be neccessary in regard to the many causes of litigation which arise concernor Vice-Consul is not justified by facts. But the impression produced by such an act is that our interests at the port in rous class under whose notice the Customs reports do not, as a rule, come. We ropean ports. But it is none the less that such is not the case in China. necessary that Her Majesty's consuls in China should be divested of this purely commercial character in Chinese eyes.

Turning to the report from Tameny THE Band of the 73rd Regt, will perform attention to a very interesting portion of the document, which has apparently been overlooked by our Northern contemporaries. Mr Kopsch directs attention to a new source of trade which may eventually exercise a powerful influence on the Russian firms at Hankow. There is, it appears, a coarse description of tea grown in Formosa which might, Mr Kopsch thinks, be converted into brick tea:-A small chop of Tea exported this quartprepared for European consumption are Mr Davies first came into Court, might in all probability be taught the Saturday. Natives, and I fancy, would be cheaper to the merchant than introducing skilled Tea firers from the mainland to prepare a common leaf, which, if ever improved by care in its cultivation or by the introduction of superior plants, must necessarily take some years, and then there is room to doubt whether Formosa Teas will ever be able to compete in the European market with those of the mainland. mains for competent authorities to judge whether the common Oolungs of this place would find favor with the Siberian peasantry and Mongols, but from the ingredients of some bricks of Tea personally examined, I should infer they have not very fastidious or refined tastes. Common Tea Leaf is retailed here at $5 per pecul free from dirt or stalks, and is consumed by the working classes. Such tea could never be exported in its natural state, as the present rate of duty would exceed its value. Abou 15,000 to 20,000 peculs is estimated as season's crop, including all qualities.

If Mr Kopsch's supposition be feasible Formosa is likely to take quite a new start in the "Tea-market." And considering how greatly public attention has of late been directed to this island, on account of the reported intentions of Prussia, we have no doubt that the suggestion thus thrown out will attract th attention of those capable of forming practical conclusion as to its value.

THE UPPER CLASS CHINESE.

THERE appears to be a curious but not status of the upper class Chinese which may be worth a few lines of correction. The members of the foreign board and others in high positions are looked upon as on a par with the better class compradores of the Hongkong firms or the semi-Anglacized natives who have acquired a more or less perfect knowledge of English, without having in a single particle renounced their own customs. We are not so friendly to the Chinese in our general remarks that we need fear to run the risk of being considered their apologists. But, despite our opinions, truth compels us to give a very different picture of the more intelligent Chinese mandarins than is accorded to them by those whose conception of "the Chinese" is founded on a passing knowledge of well to do compradores and "cheeky" house boys. To commence with, their personal appearance it is, as a rule, that of well dressed, and scrupulously cleanly personages. Scents, foreign and native are not unknown to, or unused by, the more "dandy" members of the class, while the nails, teeth, &c., are generally kept in as good order as those of an English gentleman. In go on; thought he was "scheming." conversation and manner they are urbane and polite, and, notwithstanding the very formal code by the rules of which their conduct is regulated, it is seldom irksome to the visitor, after the first few minutes. They are hospitable and, generally speaking, profuse in their entertainments, are able to maintain an amusing conversation, and shew a knowledge of men and things somewhat surprising to those who have fancied them a set of incurable blockheads. Lastly and not least they are, as a rule, well read to the extent of their not speak the whole truth before the Corohave at various times been translated from European languages into Chinese. did not speak against the turnkeys, they overwork; I should call that exhaustion, a conviction against the prisoners.
